PRESEASON HANDICAPPING TIPS

Preseason Football is not as exciting for the fans as the regular NFL season since the games do not count toward the standings and, for the most part, the 1st stringers make only cameo appearances. The 4Q of many games (especially the early ones) feature 4th and 5th stringers who were undrafted free agents and are longshots to make the team. While NFL Preseason Football is not as exciting to watch from the fans' standpoint, it is from a gambler's point of view. This is our 31st year in the handicapping business and we can tell you firsthand that it is far easier to predict the outcome of Preseason games than it is for the NFL regular season!! In the book "Ten Keys to a Winning Season", there is a chapter devoted strictly to handicapping NFL Preseason Football. While the chapter is lengthy and contains more information than can be provided in this space, we will share with you some handicapping tips for the upcoming NFL Preseason.

Rule #1 - Handicap Preseason far differently than the NFL regular season. The first rule in handicapping Preseason football is to throw out ALL thoughts of how you handicap the regular season. In the NFL regular season all the coaches and players WANT to win and try to win. In the Preseason many coaches just want to evaluate personnel and they care very little about the outcome of the game. Other coaches want to win the game so their team can gain confidence heading into the year. Sometimes there are also talent mismatches on the field due to coaches resting starters and other teams just having better 2nd and 3rd stringers. Week #3 is usually the "dress rehearsal" week but pay attention as several coaches have veered away from that over the past several seasons.

Rule #2 - Beware of coaches that do not care. We touched on this above as some coaches just do not care about the final outcome of Preseason contests. Marv Levy of Buffalo had a team that was almost always among the elite of the AFC, participated in 4 Super Bowls and annually made the playoffs in the '90's. His priority during Preseason was to make sure his veterans were rested and HEALTHY for the upcoming season. Marv compiled a 15-28-1 ATS mark during the Preseason but always opened the regular season strong and it was a philosophy that worked. The same happened with the Dallas Cowboys during their Super Bowl years. From 1992-1995 they won three Super Bowls with two different coaches (Jimmy Johnson and Barry Switzer) who could have cared less about the Preseason and just wanted to keep their players healthy. They were 5-15 ATS in that span in Preseason play!!

Rule #3 - Look for coaches who WANT to win. Sometimes a coach takes over a losing team and wants to instill a winning attitude. Jimmy Johnson went 4-0 both SU and ATS in his first year with Dallas as head coach after taking over a poor team. Yes, this was the same JJ who did not care about results a few years later. When Dennis Green took over at Minnesota he wanted to instill a winning attitude and his teams went 8-1 ATS in his first two years with a lot of blowouts. The L2Y Jim Schwartz in Detroit has tried to instill a winning attitude and went 7-1 SU and ATS in preseason action and the Lions did get their first playoff berth since 1999 last year. Coaches can play their starters longer, design gameplans for a specific team (while their opponent plays it straight up with a vanilla offense and defense) and run trick plays and reverses. Coaches do change (like JJ and Green) so try to get a feel each year for how the coach views the importance of Preseason.

Rule #4 - Look for teams that want to blitz often. Teams rarely work on blocking schemes vs the blitz during practices. For that reason, it is a very successful tactic in Preseason especially vs O-lines that are a mishmash of different units. Usually there is a gentlemen's agreement about blitzes but some ignore that. Jerry Glanville got his solid Preseason record mainly due to frequent blitzes. Tom Coughlin changed his defense to a blitzing scheme in 1997 and he wanted to work on it during the games. He went 4-0 ATS, winning by an average of 13.2 ppg that year. Look for teams that will blitz often and play on them.

Rule #5 - Follow the Quarterback Rotations. Coaches usually announce which QB's will play and for how long a day prior to game time. This is a vital part of handicapping as some teams have 2 or 3 very solid veteran QB's while others may be playing an undrafted rookie free agent in the 2nd half who has no shot of making the team. When George Seifert was at SF, he had a QB rotation of Montana, Young and Bono and that was a mismatch vs most teams rotations and he compiled a 21-7 SU record in his first 6 years there. LY Miami had a QB battle with Henne & Moore and both performed well leading the Dolphins to a 3-1 ATS record. You can do what we do searching for stories from all 32 NFL teams and also rely on the numerous scouts in those cities to follow which QB's will play and for how long. Or you could take an easier route and simply call 347-677-1700 on games days and listen to Button #5 where we let you know all the upcoming rotations as they are announced.

Rule #6 - Stay on top of changes. Below are charts detailing the total points scored and the margin of victory in pre-season games the L3Y. Some interesting changes are that in the entire 2008 preseason only 4 games had lines over 4.5 pts, only 3 games had O/U lines over 39 with only 11 games decided by over 14 points. LY just 3 years later 12 games had lines higher than 4.5 pts, 13 games had O/U totals higher than 39 and 18 games were decided by over 14 points. Always be able to adapt which is what we do best and is the reason why we are the Nation's #1 documented Preseason Service!

The Patriots were our pick to win the Super Bowl last year and had the best record in the AFC at 13-3 and were favored in the Super Bowl but came up short against the Giants. NE did so despite having the #31 rated D in the NFL and having 66 starts lost to injury throughout the year. As we mentioned in the Post Draft Issue of Power Sweep, we like the upgrade on defense including four DC's in the first three rounds spent on that side of the ball and each of the players that Belichick selected provided value. We will call for the Patriots to win their third straight AFC East Title and they are our pick to win the Super Bowl.

We went again the grain with the Jets LY as they were pre-season Super Bowl favorites by most but we did not put them in that category. The Jets were a team in disarray at the end of LY, dropping their final 3 games to fall to 8-8 and missing the playoffs altogether. All of the off field talk is about QB Tim Tebow but they made some solid additions and their schedule goes from 9th toughest in the NFL down to #24. The Jets are the trendy pick this year for 3rd in the East with almost nobody calling for them to make the playoffs so we are once again going against the grain in their forecast picking them 2nd in the East and as a Wild Card team.

Last year the Bills started out 5-2 and looked like playoff contenders but the bottom dropped out as they limped to a 1-8 finish. They had the #26 defense in the NFL and were effected by injuries on the offense including losing top RB Fred Jackson for the final six games. They made some significant additions during the offseason on defense and appear to be a borderline playoff team. They are more talented than last year, had an amazing 70 starts lost to injury and go from playing the #5 schedule to the #27 schedule. Buffalo hasn't topped the 7 wins since 2004 but we'll call for them to do this season.

The Dolphins tried hard in the offseason to acquire Peyton Manning and then Matt Flynn but came up short in both areas. Their #1DC Ryan Tannehill looks like a prospect at that position and not ready to start immediately. The Dolphins did have 3 net close losses last year and went 6-3 in their final 9 games. Also pointing in their favor is they faced the #7 schedule last year and now face our #25 schedule incl the #31 schedule at home. Still we rate their QB's (#29) and WR's (#32) among the weakest in the NFL and they have their 5th new coaching staff in 9 years. The Dolphins may have a tough time topping last year's six win total.

Pittsburgh's D just got another year older which is never a good sign but they did have the best D in the NFL LY and the L5Y their D has finished #1, #2, #5, #1 and #1. Unfortunately, the D had its worst game of the year when they lost in the 1st RD of the playoffs at DEN. The Steelers did benefit from 3 net close wins and their schedule goes from 24th toughest up to #9. On the positive side of the ledger, they were -13 in TO's LY and their +100.6 ypg was 8th best in the NFL. The Steelers have tied for 1st in the AFC North in each of the last 2 years and while their record may be weaker this year, we will call for them to do it again in 2012 but this time win the tiebreaker vs Baltimore.

Ray Lewis just got another year older at LB and 2011's NFL Def MVP Terrell Suggs suffered an Achilles injury. While he's attempting to come back late in the year, even if that happens he may not be 100% leaving a huge hole on the defense. They do have good, young talent on offense but were only +49.8 ypg LY and they go from facing the #28 schedule in the NFL to the #13. They also had just 23 starts lost to injury LY, the 8th lowest. Baltimore was a dropped to pass away from appearing in the Super Bowl but we have them tied for 1st in the North this year and projected with 10 wins after a pair of 12 wins seasons.

The Bengals have gone from 7 wins, down to 4, up to 10, down to 4 and back up to 9 LY. We think that yo-yo trend will continue in 2012. After a team is +5 wins from the previous season (4-12 to 9-7 LY) their record has decreased 75% of the time. Andy Dalton is a solid QB and is in his 2nd year as starter but only one of the Bengals offensive or defensive units rank in the upper half of the NFL. Cincinnati goes from facing the #27 schedule all the way up to 5th toughest and did have just 22 starts to injury LY (6th lowest). They are a favorite of a FG or more in only 2 games which will be added pressure on a QB with only 1 season of experience.

A quick check of the early lines that were posted in the off-season show CLE as a dog in all 16 gms TY. Yes, the schedule is difficult and they go from taking on the 15th toughest to the 4th toughest. There are some factors pointing in CLE's favor. Their D LY was actually respectable as they yielded just 332 ypg (#10). Their offense was woeful but got some significant upgrades incl two #1 and two #2 DC's who all will see starting time TY in QB Brandon Weeden, RB Trent Richardson, WR Josh Gordon and LT Mitchell Schwartz. They should have one of the more improved offenses in the NFL. We will call CLE, despite the tough sked and the Vegas early lines, to have the most wins s/07.

Teams that were +4 in net close wins have had a weaker record 75% of the time but HOU could be one of the 25% that buck the trend. The Texans won the South LY despite losing their QB Matt Schaub for the final 6 games and having top WR Andre Johnson miss 9. They also wrapped up the South with a 10-3 record then coasted before the playoffs or could have had a better record. TY HOU faces our #32 rated schedule and figures to be favored in at least 12 of their 16 games plus gets the return of Schaub. After taking the first step and getting to the playoffs they also showed they were post-season worthy by outgaining BAL by 88 yds on the road. They are now a legitimate Super Bowl contender.

Last year rookie HC Mike Munchak actually fared better than we expected, guiding the Titans to a 9 win season despite the fact Chris Johnson, who had a lengthy holdout in the off-season, was just a shell of himself rushing for a pedestrian 4.0 ypc. Matt Hasselbeck is another year older and Jake Locker is probably not ready for the full-time starter's role so QB is a ?. Also all 3 units on the D rank in our bottom 6 of the NFL. TEN finished 9-7 despite being outgained by 20.1 ypg and their schedule goes from 30th toughest in the NFL up to #20. This team might be better than LY but now faces 8 teams we project to make the playoffs and we'll call for their record to drop.

QB Blaine Gabbert hit just 50.8% with a 12-11 ratio and the JAX offense finished dead last despite having the league's top rusher in Maurice Jones-Drew. They bring in Chad Henne (31 career starts) but he left MIA with a 31-37 ratio. Their D was actually #6 in the NFL in '11 and they held 8 opponents to 17 points or less. While this team won just 5 games LY and indicators are pointing upwards they do have a new HC and it looks like a rebuilding year. The schedule doesn't set up well as they have the 10th hardest home slate and while they have the 2nd easiest road schedule they've only won 1 of their last 10 games away from EverBank. We would not classify them as a playoff contender.

Indianapolis figures to be one of the most improved teams in the country. Of course, they did not have Peyton Manning for the entire season, were -12 in TO's, had 4 net close losses, went from a 10-6 record down to 2-14 and were #2 in the NFL with 75 starts lost to injury LY. They were, however, only -84.1 ypg. With all of those indicators pointing upwards, they should get much better QB play with Andrew Luck at the helm than they did LY with Curtis Painter/Dan Orlovsky/Kerry Collins. The defense should also remain healthier and while the Colts are a much improved teams, they do have a rookie QB and a lot of newcomers and may only double LY's win total.

By reading our Post Draft Issue, you know that teams which earn "A" grades improved their record 79% of the time. From '07-'10 SD started the season 1-2, 2-3, 2-3 and 1-3. LY was atypical as they jumped out of the box 4-1 but lost 6 in a row. They still finished 8-8 and in a 3-way tie for 1st in the West. They were the only team in the league that outscored their foes (406-377) and the only one to have a positive yardage difference. Rivers had an off year, "only" throwing for 63% with a 27-20 ratio. SD was -7 in TO's, had 2 net close losses and 53 starts lost to injury. The Chargers are now under the radar despite actually being favored in 12 of their 16 games and are our surprise team to win the AFC West and are a legitimate contender for the AFC Title.

KC did a tremendous job in '10 as they were the shocking winners of the AFC West going from 3 straight last place division finishes and a combined record of 10-38 to 10-6. We were not high on KC LY as they had to face 7 tms that ranked in our top 10 at the start of the yr. QB Cassel missed the last 7 games with injury and while KC finished in the basement at 7-9, they were just 1 game from a 4-way tie for 1st. They were outscored 338-212. TY KC plays the softest schedule of the AFC West teams as they go from facing the 10th toughest schedule to the #29 schedule. They also had 54 starts lost to injury and an off ypp of 23.5 which can only improve. Their top 2 RB's were both banged up LY and that position was bolstered in the offseason. KC is a playoff contender TY.

DEN went from a middle of the road team to one of the Super Bowl favorites when they signed Peyton Manning. Keep in mind IND, despite having just average talent in '10 was 10-6 and without Manning they were just 2-14 LY. Still, the Broncos are making dramatic changes from the more run-oriented Tebow offense to the Manning pass attack. DEN was just #20 on D and #23 on offense and despite winning the AFC West, were actually outscored 390-309 and outgained by 41.2 ypg. DEN benefitted from 3 net close wins (Tebow factor), only had 21 starts lost to injury and now face the 4th toughest schedule in the NFL. If Manning returns healthy he is an MVP candidate and DEN is clearly improved but it might now show up as most expect on the scoreboard.

We are not huge fans of Carson Palmer. He was an int machine at Cincinnati and while he only got signed in wk 6 and still started the last 10 he had another negative ratio (13-16). The Raiders have yet another new HC and did not do a great deal in the offseason to improve. OAK did not have a selection until late 3rd RD and lost more than they gained in free agency and we graded them a "D" in the Post Draft Issue so they have an 78% chance of a weaker record. The Raiders won 8 games LY and were +5 in net close wins, certainly a cause for concern. They clearly look like the weakest team in the AFC West and we'll project only 4 wins.

PHI was the "Dream Team" LY and the odds on favorite to win the Super Bowl after their bevy of free agent signings. The Eagles stood just 4-8 and were eliminated from the playoff chase but won their last 4 games to gain some momentum for this year. Despite their 8-8 record, the Eagles outscored opponents 396-328 and were +74.2 ypg as they had the #4 offense and the #8 defense. PHI made even more improvements in the offseason signing DeMeco Ryans while adding in a #1DC DT, #2DC LB and #2DC DE. The Eagles were -14 in TO's, had 3 net close losses and are our choice to win the NFC East.

The NYG won a Super Bowl as a Wild Card team in '07 and the next year, while they did not win the Super Bowl, they had a stronger record improving from 10-6 to 12-4 winning their division. Once again we expect the Giants to improve their record which would be rare for a Super Bowl winner, but it is always tough to repeat. NYG were a banged up team at the start of LY that played better once the DL got healthier as they were outscored during the reg ssn (400-394) but allowed just 14 ppg in their final 6 gms. The NYG were just +8.7 ypg LY and did benefit from 2 net close wins and were +7 in TO's but should remain healthier and are a prime time contender for the East Title.

Dallas appeared to have the East wrapped up at 7-4 but lost 4 of their final 5 games including a pair to the Giants and missed the playoffs. This year 5 of their final 7 games are at home so they should have a better finish and have a much improved secondary with the additions of #1 DC Morris Claiborne and ex-KC FS CB Brandon Carr. The Cowboys are currently an underdog in 9 games with 7 of those as a 3 pt dog or less so winning the tight ones will be imperative. DAL was #11 on offense and #14 on defense last year and is a playoff contender nearly missing out on one of our very special Post Draft Issue "A" grades.

The Redskins have not won the NFC East since 1999 finishing last in 4 straight years. They made a big off-season trade positioning themselves to draft Robert Griffin III and have some signs pointing in their favor as they were -14 in TO's and had 65 starts lost to injury last year. The Redskins have the misfortune of playing in the powerful NFC East with 3 legitimate playoff and Super Bowl contenders and face the 3rd toughest schedule in the NFL with 6 of their 8 units ranking in the bottom 10 of our rankings. After their bye they have 3 road games and host PHI, the NYG, BAL and DAL making it possibly the leagues toughest finish.

The big question most of LY was whether the Packers would go undefeated with only 3 of their first 13 games decided by 7 or less but then they were stunned by KC. At 15-1 they were shocked at home in the playoffs by the Giants for a quick exit. GB's D figures to rebound as after ranking #2 and #5 in the NFL in '09 and '10 they plummeted to #32 LY. GB was +24 in TO's, had 4 net close wins and shockingly, despite their record, were outgained LY (by 6.4 ypg). While the Packers probably will not match LY's 15 win total, the results in the playoffs figure to be better and they are the preseason Super Bowl favorites.

LY the Bears' season was done in by injuries with QB Jay Cutler missing the last 6 and RB Matt Forte missing the last 4 and they went just 1-5 down the stretch. The same offense that avg'd 32 ppg in a 5 gm stretch with both players healthy avg'd only 13 ppg the L/5. They add in WR Brandon Marshall who had great success with Cutler in Denver upgrading the Bears weak spot. While the D is a year older, it is still strong and they go from facing the #8 schedule down to the #30. We give the Bears a decent chance at unseeding the Packers in the NFC North and their home finale on Dec 16th may be for the division title.

Detroit won their final 4 games in 2010 and kept that momentum going LY with a 10-6 mark giving them a 14-6 stretch in the reg ssn. They were bounced from the playoffs in New Orleans but have a great nucleus on the defensive front 7, QB Matt Stafford and WR Calvin Johnson. The Lions face 8 teams this season that we project to be in the post-season and LY were just 2-6 vs teams that made the playoffs. While DET is a legitimate threat to make the playoffs a 2nd straight time, after not having been there since 1999, and having improved their record by 4 wins in EACH of the L2Y we'll call for them to come up just short.

The Mike Smith/QB Matt Ryan combo have combined for a 43-21 record in their 4 seasons with the Falcons but they have yet to bag a playoff win. As they both enter their 5th year they figure to make a breakthrough in the playoffs. ATL dropped from 13-3 to 10-6 LY and bring a new set of coordinators incl Mike Nolan as DC. They have good speed on offense and a capable D which finished #12 last season. With the turmoil in New Orleans, we give the Falcons an excellent shot at winning the division. Since the NFC South started in 2002 no team has ever repeated with ATL taking the Title in 2010 and 2004 and this would make the tenth straight season.

We were very high on New Orleans last year and they almost made it to the Super Bowl coming up just short at SF despite a 26-17 FD edge as they were done in by -4 in TO's in that game. The Saints outscored their opponents by an avg of 13.0 ppg and were +98.7 ypg. Unfortunately, they must now deal with suspensions from the Bounty scandal incl losing their HC then having their interim HC being forced to have an interim HC for 6 games. The continuity does not appear to be in great shape. Keep in mind LY when Sean Payton when inj and did not call plays, the offense was not as effective. Talent-wise they may be the best in the South and they are currently favored in 12 of their 16 games but the coaching turmoil may be too much to overcome.

The NFL is a bounce back league. LY TB was the flavor of the month as they had a lot of young talent and were coming off a 10-6 season. We were not as high on them calling for their record to drop and it did, all the way down to 4-12. QB Josh Freeman, who was looked at as one of the rising stars of the NFL after 2010, had a poor 16-22 ratio. We look for Freeman to improve and Greg Schiano steps into a good situation as their schedule goes from 3rd toughest in the NFL to #18. They are currently favored in just 2 of their games but Tampa figures to be an under the radar team that could even flirt with a winning record.

Cam Newton had a fantastic rookie season with the Panthers yet for all of his offensive heroics (CAR #7 offense) they still finished just 6-10. CAR was +12.2 ypg. They had 4 net close losses LY and 56 starts lost to injury. The Panthers figure to be improved, especially on defense (#28 LY) but the schedule goes from #22 up to the 8th toughest. They actually were minus 5 net starters in FA and teams that were +4 wins from the previous season (2-14 to 6-10) have had a weaker record 75% of the time. This season with the tougher schedule the Panthers might not make the rise that most folks expect and we'll call for the same 6-10 finish.

LY San Francisco, coming off a 6-10 season, was inspired by Coach Jim Harbaugh nearly getting to the Super Bowl coming up 3 points short in the NFC Title game. They did have a lot of factors in their favor last year including a whopping +28 in TO's and 4 net close wins. The Niners appear to be an even stronger team this season and look to be head and shoulders above the rest in the NFC West. They probably will not catch the same amount of breaks they did LY so they won't match LY's 13 win total but they must be classified as a legitimate Super Bowl contender and should improve on offense and have another stout defense (#4 LY).

The Cardinals signed Kevin Kolb LY and were just 3-6 with him and despite relying on John Skelton as the starting QB in the other games, they went 5-2 they actually went 7-2 over their final 9 games to finish 8-8. They add in Michael Floyd to team with Larry Fitzgerald giving them an explosive receiver combo and were -13 in TO's last year. They do face the 12th toughest schedule in the NFL and might not match LY's 8 win total, but look like a better team. The key to the season will be winning on the road as they were 3-13 the L2Y and are a dog in all 8 TY with an avg line of over a TD. Currently the Cards are only favored in 4 of their 16 games.

The Seahawks won a division title in Pete Carroll's first year in 2010 but it was with just a 7-9 record and they were outscored 407-310 and were -70.8 ypg. LY the Seahawks outscored their foes 321-315 and improved their ypg (-28.4) but this time their 7-9 record was only good enough for 3rd place. SEA has 3 long flights to the East this year and have home games vs NE, GB, DAL, SF and the NYJ and are currently only favored in 5 of their 16 games. SEA did have 3 net close losses and 60 sts lost to inj, but the schedule has us calling for a 5th straight losing season.

Our Executive Club is all encompassing and the total value is OVER $10,000 as listed above. It is the Nation's most elite phone service. You receive every Late Phone Selection we release from the first Preseason Game through the Pro Bowl. There are no additional charges or special games like other services offer. Your membership includes EVERYTHING: College and Pro Selections (including Top Opinions on lined games that are not selections), Toll FREE Calling, online access to plays, Over/Unders, every Game of the Year and all of the Marquee Play Releases from our Private Play Hotline. Our Executive Club members call their own private 800 number, armed with special passcodes on game day and get plays on a taped system.

We are again offering our Executive Club for the month of September.
